

The BOSS-project

Workshop by Pär Sellberg and Helén Björnsdotter.

The Sector specific validation - Operational and Strategic Partnership (BOSS) project addresses challenges to quality assurance and to increase transparency in sector specific validation, as well as raising the legitimacy and transferability of sector specific validation results. The aim is to promote increased benefit and use of sector specific validation for employers and individuals, as well as to extend sector specific validation to more business areas in a more coherent system of validation services.

The Swedish National Agency for Higher Vocational Education is the project owner and full financed by the European Social Fund. The target group is primarily sector representatives who work with developing and managing sector specific qualifications and validation models, as well as sector representatives who want to develop their skills in these areas. Stakeholders in sector specific validation also have a role in the project.

The BOSS project provides support for sector specific validation in the form of workshops, tools, information, policies, manuals and routines. In order to achieve increased benefit and scope of sector specific validation, the project will be based on existing and planned development work in the sectors.