

VPL in working life

VPL against curricula for shortening studies in upper secondary schools has developed successfully in Iceland in the last 15 years. The target group for VPL are people with low qualified background who have develop their competences on the labor market.

In 2017 a decision was made in cooperation with the confederation of employees and the confederation of employers to explore the benefits of conducting VPL against specific job standards. Included would be to ensure the value of validation results, quality of the process and financing.

The presentation focuses on providing insights into this work and where we are at today.
